Journalist Ethan Casey visited Pakistan for the first time in 1995 and most recently in 2011. Accepting an invitation in 2003 to spend a semester teaching journalism at Beaconhouse National University in Lahore, he wrote Alive and Well in Pakistan (2004), a book of personal narrative nonfiction that has been praised as “compulsory reading for anyone visiting Pakistan” by the Harvard International Review, “magnificent” by Ahmed Rashid, “intelligent and compelling” by Mohsin Hamid and “wonderful ... a model of travel writing” by Edwidge Danitcat. In the Daily Telegraph, reviewer Alex Spillius wrote: “The author’s real journey is a search for common humanity.” Alive and Well in Pakistan was published in an updated 10th-anniversary edition, with extensive new material, in 2014.
